

I. READINGCelebrations around the World

Every year, between 21 January and 20 February, millions of people around the world celebrate Chinese New Year. During this festival they welcome the new year and celebrate wealth, health and happiness. There are lots of colourful street parades. People wear dragon and lion costumes and dance through the streets. It's fantastic! After the parade, they have a traditional Chinese New Year's meal. They have some delicious fish dishes and Chinese vegetables. They also have sesame seed balls called Gum Tzin. People say these bring luck for the year ahead.

The Americans celebrate American Independence Day on the fourth of July. They celebrate being independent from Britain. American families have barbecues. They cook burgers and chicken wings and make a special potato salad. It's delicious! In the evening they watch huge firework displays at local parks.

The British celebrate Halloween every 31 October. It is also known as All Hallow's Eve, which means the day before All Saints' Day. People believed that ghosts and evil creatures came out on this night and so they tried to scare them away. Today children dress up as witches, ghosts and monsters. They make lanterns from pumpkins and play 'trick or treat' with their neighbours. The neighbour can choose to give the children sweets or money as a 'treat' or have a 'trick' played on them.

The Americans celebrate Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday in November each year. Early settlers in America couldn't find enough food to eat and many of them died in the first winter. The Native Americans helped them the next year and they had enough to eat. They had a celebration to give thanks for the survival. Today people remember those difficult times and celebrate by eating a traditional dinner of turkey, stuffing, cranberries, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie. It's a national holiday and schools, offices and many businesses are closed. Families get together and many towns and cities have parades with balloons, floats and people in fancy dress costumes.
